TWO FRIENDS.

A Pathetic Story of the Siege of Paris.

One clear morning in January—that terrible January during the siege, when famine was knocking at the very gates of Paris—M. Morissot, a clockmaker by trade, but rendered an idler by force of circumstances, was strolling slowly along the outer boulevards. As with bowed head and hands thrust deep in his pockets he walked on engrossed in his own sad thoughts, he suddenly stopped before a man whom he recognized as an old friend. It was M. Sauvage, whose acquaintance he had made on the river bank.

On each Sunday before the war Morissot used to set out at dawn with a bamboo cane in his hand and a tin box strapped on his back. He went by the Argenteuil railroad as far as Colombes, and then walked to the Isle of Marante. Scarcely arrived at that dreamy place he would begin to fish, and would stay there till nightfall.

On each Sunday he used to meet a stout, jovial fellow, M. Sauvage, of the Rue Notre Dame de Lorette, who was also an enthusiastic fisherman. They ofter passed a half day together, sitting side by side, their lines in their hands and their feet dangling over the current, and a friendship soon sprang up between them.

On some days they would not exchange a word with one another, but they grew into that perfect understanding which exists between persons who have similar tastes and who experience similar emotions.

The two friends shook hands cordially, but both felt a tinge of sadness at meeting under such gloomy circumstances. M. Sauvage sighed and murmured:

"What a condition of things!"

Morissot gloomily replied:

"And what fine weather!"

They began to walk side by side and Morissot continued:

"And our fishing? How pleasant it is to think of it!"

M. Sauvage demanded:

"When shall we ever be able to go again?"

They entered a little cafe and drank together an absinthe and then resumed their promenade along the boulevard.

Morissot stopped suddenly:

"Another glass?"

M. Sauvage assented:

"At your pleasure," and they went into another cafe. When they came out M. Sauvage exclaimed:

"Supposing we go?"

"Why, fishing, to be sure."

"But where?"

"To our old place. The French advanced posts are near Colombes. I know Col. Dumoulin and I am sure that he will let us pass."

Morissot trembled with anticipation.

"Good!" he cried. "I am with you," and they parted to get their hooks and lines.

An hour later they were walking side by side on the highway, and soon reached the villa in which the colonel had established his headquarters. He smiled at their request and good-naturedly granted them a pass.

By eleven o'clock they had passed the outer pickets and Colombes, and found themselves at the border of a small vineyard that sloped down towards the Seine.

Before them lay the apparently dead and deserted village of Argenteuil. The heights of Orgemont and Sanneis dominated the landscape, and the broad plain that extends as far as Nanterre was a picture of desolation with its leafless trees and gray stretches of bare earth.

M. Sauvage pointed toward the summit of the hills, and murmured:

"The Prussians are there."

"Eh? Supposing we should meet them?"

M. Sauvage replied with that Parisian joviality

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Congressman at Large,
JAMES D. HANCOCK, of Venango.

EXPLORER JACKSON said at Hull, England, that he will start in July on a search for an unknown continent in the Arctic ocean.

Now that congress has passed the Wilson bill it behooves the senate to "get a move on" and show that they can be of some use to the country.

EMPEROR WILLIAM announced at Berlin that the commercial treaty with Russia had been signed, and warned the reichstag that war might follow its rejection.

THE World's Fair Board of this state has closed its labors. The amount of money it received was $308,000, and the financial statement shows a surplus of $1,600.

GEORGE W. CHILDS, proprietor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger died at his home in that city, on Saturday morning from the effects of a stroke of paralysis sustained by him on the 18th of January. He was born in Baltimore, Md., May 12, 1829. Except his wife, Mr. Childs has no immediate family.

THE senate did not come to a vote on the Federal election bill on Wednesday as was anticipated. Several senators who had not hitherto spoken desired an opportunity to be heard on the measure, and by unanimous consent the time of general debate was extended.

AMERICAN canned goods get a hard blow by the decision of General Mercier, French Minister of war, that canned goods for the army shall in future be exclusively of French manufacture. Hitherto the goods have been furnished by Americans, who held a monopoly. The change will increase the cost of the goods to the government 130 per cent., and it will have to ask a supplementary credit in order to procure its supplies

THE agricultural building at the World's Fair grounds in Chicago, was slightly damaged by fire on Wednesday afternoon. After the fire was out a section of glass about 100 feet long fell from the roof, narrowly missing a number of firemen who were underneath. There are only about three car loads of exhibits in the building and they were at no time in any danger. The fire was of incendiary origin. Earlier in the day a blaze was discovered in a pile of rubbish close to the building.

THE Mercantile Journal a Republican paper in discussing the financial question in a recent issue gives the following as the causes for business depression:

Various causes are given in accounting for the financial stringency and business depression in this country.

The silver question and fear of tariff revision are the causes most generally assigned. While these have no doubt contributed, it is becoming more apparent every day that the chief cause has been extravagant speculation throughout the world.

The past ten years have been years of the most extravagant speculation that the world has seen. Fabulous sums have been sunk in speculation in railroads, canals, new towns and banks, especially in South America, Australia and the United States.

The bubble burst in several South American states two years ago; in Australia last year, which resulted almost in national bankruptcy, and now we have "settlement time" in this country.

There is much financial stringency in England and Germany at the present time because of large sums lost in bad investments in Australia and America. The new countries have been heavy borrowers from England and Germany, and the loss of confidence on the part of investors in those countries was the principal cause of the panics in Australia and the United States.

The "silver scare" no doubt contributed to the panic last summer, and the tariff agitation is now retarding recovery, but neither has been a prime factor. The worst is now over and business is on the up grade. Every day brings improvement over the preceding one. Investors the world over are recovering confidence. Capital, which has been accumulating in the financial centers causing stagnation elsewhere is already seeking new investments. Nearly all the world have been sellers during the past year, which caused prices to tumble, but sellers are turning buyers and values are becoming firmer. With the tariff question disposed of the conditions are favorable for rapid recovery in all lines of business.

As bearing on the financial future it is well to remember these facts. The losses in the United States in railroads, mines and town sites have been largely apparent, while the losses of foreign investors have been real, the money having been deposited in this country, where it remains in some form. For instance, the losses during the past year to stockholders and bondholders in railroad securities aggregate about $1,500,000,000. Probably one half this amount was held by foreigners and to them the loss is almost total.

The property purchased by this money, however, largely remains, and will be good in the future. Individuals here have lost their investments, but other individuals got the money and the people of the country have property, which in many cases will in a short time be worth more than ever before. Men of courage and confidence in the future are now buying stocks and bonds at a fraction of their cost and true value, and will beyond a doubt realize handsomely on their investments in the near future.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON D. C. Feb. 3d, 1894.—President Cleveland was one of the first, outside of his congressional colleagues, to extend congratulations to Chairman Wilson on the success of his tariff fight in the House. The congratulations were telephoned from the White House to the capitol. Mr. Wilson is not a man of robust health at the best, and the continuous and arduous labor which he has performed since becoming chairman of the Ways and Means committee has almost completely broken him down. He has earned a rest and he will probably leave Washington to spend several weeks in some quiet place. Other Democrats at times allowed the noise of the opposition to raise doubts of the passage of the bill but Mr. Wilson has been confident from the day the bill was reported from the committee that it would pass without being materially changed. The result shows that his confidence was built upon a firm foundation—the belief that men elected to congress on a tariff reform issue would not allow themselves to be stampeded by a manufactured sentiment against tariff reform.

Representative Dingley, of Maine, was the only Republican who succeeded in getting an amendment to the tariff bill adopted. He moved that the bond period provided in the whiskey clause of the internal revenue section of the bill should be three years, as at present, instead of eight years, as reported from the committee, and the House voted with him.

Democratic opposition to the income tax amendment, which at one time seemed strong enough to endanger the whole bill, began to grow less and less early in the week and a day or two before the vote was taken had grown so insignificant that it was no longer considered a factor in the fight. If the Democratic Senators will do as well as the Democrats in the House have done tariff reform will soon be here, but indications do not point to speedy action by the Senate.

Upon evidence presented by Judge Durand, of Mich., who has been acting as special counsel in the smuggling cases, the treasury department has decided to push the indictment against Whitney L. Boise, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Oregon for complicity in the illegal landing of Chinese in that state. Judge Durand brought with him to Washington the chief of a band of coast smugglers who has turned state's evidence. He it was who furnished the evidence against Boise, and he implicates several other prominent Republicans of the state who will be prosecuted if sufficient corroborative evidence can be secured.

So many lies have been told concerning the absence of Senator McPherson, of New Jersey, who was recently ordered south by his physician because of a severe bronchial affection, that he has returned to Washington and announced that he would resume his duties, although his doctor says he will endanger his life by so doing. Mr. McPherson's friends, among whom is President Cleveland, are trying to pursuade him not to resume his work until his health gets better. I can state on the very highest authority that no break has taken place in the pleasant relations which have existed for years between Senator McPherson and Voorhees, and that all stories to the contrary are maliciously false.

The debate on the Tucker bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws will close in the senate next Tuesday and the bill will be passed, notwithstanding the silly stories which have been widely circulated attributing indifference on the part of Democratic senators towards the bill. Not one word has been said by a Democrat to indicate that a single Democratic senator will vote against the bill or remain away to keep from voting upon it. Neither is there any truth in the statement that Mr. Cleveland has expressed, opposition to the bill.

Secretary Carlisle accepted bids yesterday for the $50,000,000 of bonds, in accordance with the official announcement recently made, notwithstanding the futile attempt of the Knights of Labor to prevent the issue by obtaining an injunction from the courts and the twaddle from Senators Allen, Peffer, Stewart and Hoar about the illegality of their issue. There is some talk in favor of the Bailey resolution, which has been favorably reported to the House, being rushed through as a hint to Secretary Carlisle that the money received for the bond shall only be used to strengthen gold reserve fund, but as Representative McCreary has secured the right of way for the next three days in the House for his Hawaiian resolution it is clear that Mr. Bailey's resolution cannot come up until the expiration of that time. Senator Sherman strongly favors Secretary Carlisle's action, but other Republicans are trying to make trouble, hoping to gain some partisan advantage. M.

A Hospital Burned.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., February 5.—The Memorial hospital, an institution for women and children at 608 Prospect Place, was almost totally destroyed by fire this evening. The fire was discovered on the stone floor shortly after 6 o'clock, which caused great excitement among the inmates, but fortunately no fatalities occurred. When the fire broke out there were twenty-eight patients in the institution, thirteen women and five young children. Some of them were able to leave the hospital without assistance, but twelve of them had to be carried out on cots and matresses. Some of the patients were so excited when the flames were discovered that it was with the utmost difficulty that they were prevailed upon by the police and nurses from jumping from the windows. The fire was caused by a defective flue and caused damage amounting to about $10,000.

Shot His Step-Mother.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 5—. Charles Messner, aged 20 years, shot and fatally injured his step-mother, and then committed suicide by shooting himself through the head, at their home, in this city to-night. Messner was married five weeks ago. He visited his step-mother's to-night, and, after a short while, began quarreling with her. Suddenly the young man turned to his sister, kissed her good-bye and gave her his pocketbook, with a little change in it. He then drew out his pistol and shot twice at his step-mother. The first ball hit her in the face and the second in the neck. He then put the revolver to his head and blew his brains out.

Looted Freight Trains.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 3.—William Samsell was arrested here to-day and taken to Columbiana on the charge of burglarizing cars on the Ft. Wayne road. Samsell confessed to being one of a gang of men who have systematically looted freight trains on this road. At Columbiana there is a heavy grade where the trains are compelled to slow up. It has been the practice of the gang to board the cars at that point and throw off goods and conceal them under a culvert from which place they were carried away in a wagon.

It is said the robbery has been on the wholesale plan and the railroad detectives have been working on the case a long time. A part of the stolen goods were located in the cellar of a man named Howell and the fact was tipped off to the members of the gang, who escaped.

Red and White Soldiers Fight.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 3.—There was a lively fight at Fort Omaha between the white and Indian soldiers, and as a result half a dozen of the reds are now in the hospital. Bad blood has existed for some time between the white and red troopers,, and a number of white soldiers attacked several of the Indians and gave them a good whipping. The Indians went to their quarters and aroused their comrades. Being largely outnumbered the whites fled. Only one white soldier so far as known was hurt in the melee. The guards were called out and the Indianz driven to their quarters.

—We would call attention to the advertisement of Henry Sproul & Co., of Pittsburg, Pa., in another column. This is an old and very reliable house and parties desiring to invest could not place themselves in better hands.

—The election proclamation which is likely to be found on our 2nd page came in on Wednesday and has crowded a lot of reading matter out of our columns. It will, however, be of interest to the voting portion of our readers.

—Notwithstanding there is a reward of $1,000 offered for the capture of Jacob Bookwalter, the alleged murderer of John Cunningham, in Indiana county, he is still at large. He is supposed to be harbored by some of his friends.

—James Adams, son of Christopher Adams, of Barr township, died at his home on Thursday, February 1st, of consumption, aged about 23 years. The deceased was buried in St. Bendict's cemetery at Carrolltown on Monday last.

—Ed. J. Mildren, who a number of years ago was a resident of Johnstown and mine boss for the Cambria Iron Company and who since that time has been engaged in the manufacture of fire brick at Blacklick, Indiana county, has become financially embarassed. Executions aggregating $8,000 have been issued at Indiana and the works have been closed throwing two or three hundred men out of employment.

—If the borough authorities would make an example of some of the boys who are continually throwing snow balls on the street, it would be a benefit to everybody. In the first instance the return must be made to the prothonotary and in person; in the other instance the return can be made in the ordinary manner to the clerk of the courts. The judges will no doubt make both returns at the same time.

—The Park hotel, the largest hotel in Somerset, caught fire at an early hour on Tuesday morning and burned to the ground, the guests barely escaping in their night clothing and one servant girl, Ella Hartman, being severely burned. Many of the inmates had narrow escapes. The original building was the home of the late Judge Jeremiah S. Black and had been remodled and turned into a hotel. The loss is estimated at $15,000, partly covered by insurance.

—Godfrey May, proprietor of two large dry goods stores at Latrobe, shot his wife because she refused to indorse a check, and then committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. Mrs. May's wounds are serious, but she will recover. May had been drinking heavily for several days and had tried to kill his wife on Saturday, but was prevented by a large dog, which attacked him. The May's came to Latrobe from New York two years ago, and were quite wealthy.

—The Low Grade division of the West Penn railroad was recently completed to Johnstown by way of the old tow path, and it is said that hereafter the bulk of the freight received from the west over the Ft. Wayne and bilfed to the seaboard, will be taken over the West Penn to Johnstown, where it will run on the main line. The grade to Johnstown over the West Penn is so light that one engine can haul from forty to fifty cars, while to the the same point over the Pennsylvania road but twenty-five cars can be hauled by one locomotive.—Johnstown Herald.

—A subscriber asks what compensation a farmer is entitled to for erecting and maintaining a watering trough at the side of a public road. The road law of 1876 says that anyone who may erect a watering trough on a public road or highway and keep the same in repair is entitled to a fee not exceeding five dollars, to be agreed upon at the time by the party erecting the trough and the township supervisor. These watering places shall be approved by the supervisor and but one trough in every five miles can have the benefit, the oldest troughs having the preference.

—One day last week while a driver from the stable of Messrs. O'Hara, Luther and & Davis, in this place, was taking a party out to look at some coal lands in Jackson township, the team while crossing over where a drift had been run in, broke through. Notwithstanding a number of men were at work close by and rendered all the assistance they could, it was with much difficulty that one horse was extricated, while the other was completely hurried by the earth which kept continually falling in, and after several hours work, had to be shot and left in the hole.

A Farmer's Tragic Death.

James Rager, a Jackson township farmer, was killed Saturday afternoon in the woods some distance from his home by a heavy log falling upon him. Mr. Rager had been engaged in hauling timber in the woods and, being alone, the exact nature of the accident will probably never be known. It is the presumption, however, that Rager was in the act of lifting the heavy log upon a low bob sled and that his feet slipped, when he fell with the timber upon his body. When supper time arrived Mrs. Rager became alarmed about his absence, and after awaiting for more than an hour she called at the homes of some of her neighbors to whom she related the circumstances of her husband's failure to return from the woods. Not having any idea as to what section of the farm he had gone, the party were at a loss to know in what direction to start. With lanterns they made a search in the woods for more than two hours, but without success. They then returned to Mr. Rager's home, hoping that in the meantime he might have returned. Here they again met disappointment. Reinforcing themselves the searching party again started for the woods, determined not to return until they traversed the entire farm or found Mr. Rager. After a long tramp which lasted until 11 o'clock, they succeeded in finding the team in the woods and close by the dead body of Mr. Rager. A heavy log was lying close by and from the general appearance of things it is thought an accident occurred as above described.

Holiday Cheer.

The holiday season is close upon us, and every household in the land is preparing for the plum pudding, and the general feasting and rejoicing. A little good brandy for the mince pie, rum for the pudding, or a little stimulant to keep the spirits up and the cold out, is absolutely necessary for an old-time Christmas cheer. One of the most prominent liquor dealers in the country, Mr. Max Klein, of Allegheny, Pa., whom we can cheerfully recommend, and who has the reputation for handling only absolutely pure liquors, will sell you the following brands of six-year-old pure Pennsylvania ryes at $1.00 per full quart or six for $5.00: Bear Creek, Gibson, Guckenheimer, Finch and Overholt. The famous Silver Age, the finest whisky in the country, at $1.50, and Duquesne, a whiskey distilled from rye and malt, at $1.25 per quart; Guckenheimer, 4 years old, at 75c. quart, and the Anchor rye at 50 cents. You can have your choice of all kinds of California wines, gins, rum and brandy, all pure and old, at from 50 cents per quart up. All goods neatly boxed and shipped by express. Send for catalogue and price list of all kinds of liquors to Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny, Pa.

Death of Mrs. Durbin.

Mrs. Catharine Durbin, relict of ex Sheriff Augustine Durbin, of Munster township, died at her home in that township, on Thursday of last week, in the 90th year of her age.

The deceased was born in Cambria township, in March, 1804, and was a daughter of John Scanlan, deceased, one of the pioneer settlers of Cambria county. She was twice married, her first husband being Jacob, Feltz and three children born of her first marriage survive, namely: Mrs. M. E. Adams, of Cresson, Mrs. William Caltan, now in Baltimore and Mrs. Zachariah Endress, of Altoona. To her first husband she bore two children, James Durbin, who died about five years ago and Johanna, who is single and resided with her mother. She is also survived by one brother, Henry Scanlan, Esq., of Carrolltown. The deceased was noted for her kind and charitable disposition and leaves many friends who will sincerely mourn her death.

—A sleighing party from Gallitzin drove up to this place on Wednesday and after taking dinner at the Mountain House, spent several hours viewing the town and shaking hands with friends. AMERICAN AMUSEMENTS.

The Immense Amount of Money Spent in Theaters.

A Large Army of Professionals Are Kept Busy—Fortunes Annually Spent in Traveling on the Railroads.

It is estimated that there are perhaps as many as 1,000 traveling theatrical companies in the United States, says the Washington Post. This includes everything that can be considered strictly professional companies, to say nothing of the countless amateur organizations. Of the strictly theatrical organizations it is safe to presume that the average receipts per night for the 1,000 companies are $400 each. At seven performances per week for each company the weekly average, as will be seen, would be $2,800. The average theatrical season is forty weeks. The entire 1,000 companies with an average nightly receipt of $400 would produce weekly receipts at seven performances per week amounting to $2,800,000. This multiplied by forty, the number of weeks in a season, would yield gross receipts amounting to $112,000,000.

From the above estimates some idea can be formed of what the American people spend annually for amusements by companies which are known as strictly professional. Thousands of dollars are also spent with amateur theatrical organizations and lecture bureaus.

It would appear from the above statement that a great deal of money is made by theatrical people. The expenses incident to earning $112,000,000 are very large. It is reasonable to say that one-third, or $39,000,000, of the total $112,000,000, is spent with railroads. Another very large item is expended for printing. Great fortunes have been amassed by printing houses in the production of theatrical printing alone. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are also spent for advertising in newspapers. It is safe to say that 40 per cent. of the correspondence between theatrical managers is carried on by telegraph, which amounts to a great deal in a year's time.

The traveling companies, however, are not the sole possessors of the grand total, $112,000,000. This is divided between the traveling companies and the owners of the houses where the companies play. The net receipts derived by the companies would perhaps be in the neighborhood of 65 per cent. or 70 per cent., making an average net result of between $75,000,000 and $80,000,000. Out of this, of course, comes all of the expenditure for railroad transportation, and over one-half of the total amount paid for newspaper advertising. Out of this also is paid fully 95 per cent. of the amount paid to printing houses.

The 1,000 traveling companies will average fifteen people to a company, making a total of 15,000 theatrical people traveling over the country forty weeks out of the fifty-two. This, of course, does not include the number of people employed at theaters. Upon the estimate made as to the number of companies there must of necessity be the same or more number of theaters, as two companies cannot play at the same theater on the same night. There are at least on an average fifteen people employed at every theater, which would be 15,000. This added to the number of people traveling would make a total of 30,000 people. It is said that there 3,000 actors and actresses now out of employment. There are at least engaged in the theatrical business directly or indirectly—those who make a living from it—60,000.

Some actors make a great deal of money; some do not. Those who make the most are generally those who say the least about it. Those who make the least on annual tours are as a class those who do the most talking about having done the greatest business. A great many managers and stars hold to the old-fashioned idea that they must always talk about the enormous business they are doing, the people they are turning away from their houses, and how many times a week the "Standing Room Only" sign is out. They do this for the express purpose of attempting to deceive the public. The best evidence that a traveling theatrical attraction is a good one is the fact that large audiences attend it.

Old Mexican Mines.

Whenever a cave is newly discovered in New Mexico or Arizona the finder's first hope is that he has unearthed an old Spanish or Mexican mine, but this seldom or never has proved to be the case. Generally these holes in the mountains are natural caves in limestone or sandstone formations, but sometimes they lie between walls of hard rock, which perhaps contain mineral deposits, indicating that the primitive civilized Indians may have dug their way in following a soft streak in search of talc to use in pottery making, with no thought for precious metals. Stalactites, snowy white, hang from their roofs, and where mineral water has percolated these crystallizations take on gorgeous metallic hues. Human bones are sometimes found in these caves and other evidences of human work or former occupancy. The Coffee cave and Robinson's cave, in the Black range, in southern New Mexico, have been explored for several hundred feet, and other large caves in that region remain to be explored.

IDENTIFYING CRIMINALS.

The Ten-Year-Old System, Which Has Proved a Uniform Success.

The identification service at the prefecture of police, Paris, is one of the most recent and not the least curious creations of the department. It is now ten years since this service was organized by M. Bertillon. At the prefecture I was shown (writes a correspondent of the Leeds Mercury) a collection of about one hundred and twenty thousand photographic records of arrested persons who had been taken to the depot. These are ranged in five hundred drawers on rollers, called "cabriolets." By a process of elimination the packets are so classified according to distinguishing physical features as to enable a stranger going there for the first time to identify an arrested person if previously apprehended by the prefecture in less than five minutes. A practical exemplification of the system was given me, in company with some other visitors, the other day. A rough-looking youth of twenty years of the souteneur class had just been brought to the depot on a charge of the three-card or confidence trick. To the question, "Have you ever been here before?" a sullen "No" was elicited. "Your name?" "Leon Renault," which appropriation of the identity of a former prefect of police and distinguished advocate caused a general titter. In the twinkling of an eye the alleged first offender was put through the measuration process, which the lad rather resented, on the ground that he was not there "to be made a sight of." But "M. Renault" was quickly reduced to reason. When the measurements were taken, one of the party was invited to search for the duplicate in the pigeonhole. In less time than it takes to write this Leon Renault appeared under the same photographic resemblance as a certain "Rossinol," which the culprit was at last forced to recognize as his face.

is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendant (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendant, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark—

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost.

A watch case opener will be sent free to any one by the manufacturers.

THE SURPLUS GIRL.

Better for Her to Work Than to Be Thrown Into the River.

The tendency of an increasing population is nearly always to an overproduction—or at least to what is generally considered an overproduction—of girls, and the result is a problem which has been the cause of much vexations and unsatisfactory thinking in all ages, says the St. Louis Republic.

The Chinese have a solution which they look on as final, but in many other countries there is such objection to the idea of throwing surplus girl babies into the river that it can hardly operate with the same success which attends it in China.

As they are not thrown into the river they grow up and then they must get a living in some way. This has occurred to Lady Emily Dilke, and has moved her to make an investigation of their condition.

The picture she draws in the Fortnightly Review is a gloomy one. She concludes that the secret of England's manufacturing supremacy is the cheap labor of women and girls, and she is also of the opinion that the results of setting the women and girls to work to eke out the earnings of the head of the family "are simply suicidal."

It is no doubt true that the success of English manufactures depends largely on the cheap labor of women and girls, and we venture to say that it is to some extent true of every successful manufacturing country. It is certainly true of the New England states, which are notorious for their overproduction of girls.

It is not necessary to dwell on the evils incident to any industrial system which relies mainly on such labor. They are apparent. But the assumption that they outweigh the benefits is rash indeed.

The increasing employment of women and girls in production means that through the advance of civilization, resulting in the invention of highly improved machinery, work can now be done by women that was formerly far beyond their strength. When one girl can operate a machine that will do the work of five fully developed men it is useless to expect that the five men will be employed in place of the one girl and the machine.

It is also illogical and short-sighted to look on the improvement in machinery which increases the demand for female labor as an evil in itself.

The English or the German peasant girl who works on the farm does much harder and more brutalizing labor than the girl of the factory. Many evils attend the employment of girls in operating machines. No father who can support his daughters should allow them to go into a factory. The girl is most fortunate who can afford to grow up with no other business than that of "housewife." But as all are not supremely fortunate it is well to recognize that what may seem an unmixed evil may be really a minor benefit.

It is better for girls to work in factories and stores than to be thrown into the river, as happens to them in China, or to be obliged to use the mattock and spade in the fields, as they are in Europe.

We are not doing nearly as well as we might in this matter or in any other, but still we are doing a great deal better than professional pessimists are capable of understanding.

INDUSTRY OF THE MOLE.

The Hard-Working Little Animal at Least as Industrious as the Ant.

A mole's life is by no means a gentlemanly sinecure, according to the Cornhill Magazine. He has to work harder, in all probability, for his pittance of earthworms than any other animal works for his daily bread. His whole existence is spent in perpetually raising and removing large piles of earth by sheer force of muscle. In order to sustain such constant toil and to replace and repair the used-up tissue the mole requires to be always eating. His appetite is voracious. He works like a horse and eats like an elephant. Throughout his waking hours he is engaged in pushing aside earth and scurrying after worms in all his galleries and tunnels. The laborer, of course, is worthy of his hire. Such ceaseless activity can only be kept up by equally ceaseless feeding, and so the mole's existence is one long avaunt alternation of labor and banqueting. His heart and lungs and muscles are working at such a rate that if he goes without food for half a day he starves and dies of actual inanition. He is a high pressure engine. His drinking is like his eating; immoderate in all things he must have his liquor much and often. So he digs many pits in his tunneled ground and catches water in them to supply his needs at frequent intervals. He does not believe, however, in the early closing movement. Day and night alike he drinks every few hours, for day and night are all alike to him. He works and rests by turn, after the fashion of the navvies employed in digging tunnels, or measures his time by watches, as is the way of sailors.

One Consolation.

The author of "From Tripoli" to Tunis" tells an amusing story of a dispute between a diplomatist and a customs official at Tripoli. On the dock at Tripoli may be seen a curious collection of articles. They represent import and export taxes and are sold by the customs officials. The import tax is eight per cent. of the value and the export tax is one per cent. If anyone refuses to pay the tax the officials take possession of one-eighth of the merchandise. Some time ago a European foreign minister visited Tripoli in the service of his country. He had with him three hundred visiting cards. When a tax was demanded on these he was angry and refused to pay it. A high official of the government was summoned to settle the matter. He solemnly confiscated eight per cent. of the merchandise in question—twenty-four visiting cards. "Very well, keep them," cried the irate ambassador. "keep them. I resign myself. I shall not be obliged to pay you a visit of ceremony for twenty-four years."

Far Stronger Than Oak.

It would be difficult, says the St. Louis Republic, to convince the average man that fir is a stronger wood than oak, but such has been proven by actual tests that were made by a fair and impartial committee appointed for that purpose. The timbers used were each 2x4 inches and 4 feet long, both ends solidly braced and the weight applied in the middle of the span. Yellow fir stood a strain of 3,062 pounds, common Oregon oak, 2,922 pounds. Fine-grained yellow fir from near the butt stood a strain of 3,655 pounds, and best Michigan oak snapped with a strain of only 2,428 pounds. The tests were made by the Northern Pacific Railway company at Tacoma, Wash.

Queen Victoria's Family.

The royal family of England is the largest in Europe. Her majesty Queen Victoria's family circle numbers fifty living descendants, including sons and daughters, grandsons and granddaughters, great grandsons and great-granddaughters, besides whom she has four sons-in-law and four daughters-in-law, five grandsons-in-law and one granddaughter-in-law. The queen has lost one son and one daughter, five grandsons, one granddaughter, one great-grandson and one son-in-law. If these were living her family circle would number seventy-four.

DESTRUCTIVE OCCUPATIONS.

Poisons That Lurk for Flax and Artificial Flower Workers.

Very little is known of the danger to life and health that exists in many occupations where women are largely employed. In England a league has been formed to call attention to the facts of the case, and Mrs. C. Mollet has made extentive investigations, says the New York Sun.

In the linen trade the flax has to be left to soak in the water, and rheumatism, bronchitis and pneumonia seize upon the women who have to deal with it in this stage. In the flax-carding department the fine dust produces lung disease and kills its victims at thirty. In fur-cape making the odor and the fine fluff are both extremely injurious. A singular injury is caused to artificial flower makers, especially those employed in making white flowers by gaslight. The dry dust causes inflamed eyelids, and the work is so trying that women are worn out long before middle age. In the china trade the clay dust settles year by year in the lungs until consumption results.

In the white-lead trade horrors are found quite equal to those of the phosphorus match trade. Lead is in itself highly poisonous, and the most dangerous part of the process of making the ordinary blue pigs of lead into the deadly white carbonate is carried on by women, because it requires less muscular strength than the rest. Cakes of lead are put to ferment in tan and acetic acid for three months, and then the cakes have to be grubbed out of the mixture by hand, the poison getting under the finger nails. After being ground to powder under water the dishes of damp lead have to be placed in a stove to dry for a fortnight. The worst part is when these poor women have to take away the dry, hot, white carbonate of lead from the stoves. Even the muffled heads, the wooden respirators, the sack overalls, fail to keep out the deadly dust. They rarely live many years; sometimes a few weeks or months bring on the symptoms of acute lead poisoning, to which they rapidly succumb. This white carbonate of lead is used for glazing china and enamel advertisements. The only safeguard would be in prohibiting the manufacture, and it would be possible to do so, for various substitutes are in the market.

THE TABLES TURNED.

A Would-Be Vivisector Operated On by His Savage Allies.

One of the most curious expeditions ever planned by man was that once undertaken by Dr. J. G. Bunting, of Portland, says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal. During all his life he had been a close student of the philosophy of digestion, and for the purpose of his investigations he had that remarkable Canadian, Alexis St. Martin, in his care for twenty years. In order to cinch matters and provide facts for some of the doubting Thomases, Dr. Bunting cast about for some one else upon whom he might continue to experiment.

He could think of but one plan, and that was to go to Africa, buy two slaves and operate upon their stomachs, by opening the body near the fifth rib and perforating the stomach a condition could be produced similar to that existing in the person of St. Martin. Therefore the doctor purchased his supplies and sailed across to Tunis, in the north of Africa. There he hired a native chief with forty of his followers, paying them a liberal retaining fee and promising alluring largess when the trip was ended. They set forth. The doctor carried one thousand pounds in his inside pocket and the chief probably lay awake four nights thinking about the matter. At any rate, on the fifth night he sneaked into the doctor's tent and delivered a little address over the muzzles of two pistols. When he had concluded the doctor passed over his ducats and the chief passed over the border along with his renegade band. They helped themselves to such supplies as suited their artless and unenlightened tastes. The doctor came back without a retinue and with a deal of experience that will never appear in a medical work.

Some German Bulls.

A German newspaper man, evidently jealous of the Irishman's reputation as a maker of bulls, took the trouble some years ago, says the London Figaro, to look up the German record in this line. Among others he found in the published works of certain Teutonic writers the following curious examples: "Among the immigrants was an old blind woman, who came to America once more before she died to see her only son." "After the door was closed a soft female foot slipped into the room, and with her own hand extinguished the taper." "Both doctors were unable to restore the deceased once more to life-and health." "The Ladies' Benefit association has distributed twenty pairs of shoes among the poor, which will dry up many a tear." "I was at the table enjoying a cup of coffee when a gentle voice tapped me on the shoulder. I looked around and saw my old friend once more."

Managed It Between Them.

It used to be the custom in England for pheasants to feed from boxes which opened when the bird stood on a rail in front, the box shutting to again as soon as the bird left the rail. By this device the food was protected from all manner of thieves. It so happened, according to Bishop Stanley, of Norwich, that a coot or water-hen had studied the movements of the pheasants, and being anxious to get its meals as easily as they got theirs it tried the box one day. As it was not heavy enough to raise the lid, it kept jumping on the rail to give extra force to its weight; still the result was not satisfactory. Accordingly, it went away, but returned soon with another coot. The weight of the two birds was now sufficient to cause the box to open.

Telephones in Sweden.

In no other country of the world is the telephone in so general use as in Sweden, and in no other is the service so cheap and at the same time so perfect. It is under government control and the rates are fixed by the government. A few weeks ago a new line was opened between Stockholm and Christiania by King Oscar, who took occasion to express the hope in the first message to the Norwegians that the line would tend to draw the two countries into closer union and aid in overcoming the desire of the Norwegian radicals to break up the existing relations. It is now proposed, by means of a submarine cable, to connect the Norwegian and Swedish capitals with Copenhagen.

Physiological Oddities.

The muscles of a well-developed human jaw can exert a force of 534 pounds according to recent experiments. The blood in its natural state contains an amount of pure water that is really astonishing to one who has not given the subject attention—nearly seven-eighths of its entire bulk. Kiel estimates the surface of the lungs at 150 square feet, or ten times that of the external body. There is enough of iron in the blood of 48 men to make a plowshare of 24 pounds weight.

HEART DISEASE 20 YEARS.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

DEAR SIRS: For 20 years I was troubled with heart disease. Would frequently have falling spells and smothering at night. Had to sit up or get out of bed to breathe. Had pain in my left side and back most of the time; at last I became dropsical. I was very nervous and nearly worn out. The least excitement would cause me to faint. I was also much troubled with fluttering. For the last fifteen years I could not sleep on my left side or back until began taking your New Heart Cure. I had not taken it very long until I felt much better, and I can now sleep on either side or back without the least discomfort. I have no pain, smothering, dropsy, no wind on stomach or other disagreeable symptoms. I am able to do all my own housework without any trouble and consider myself cured.

Elkhart, Ind., 1888. MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

THE MATABELE KING.

Downfall of Lubengula, the Bloodthirsty African.

General Rejoicing Over the Termination of a Barbarous and One-Sided Warfare in the Dark Continent—Reign of Terror.

The general satisfaction which has been felt throughout South Africa at the victory of the Chartered company's forces is caused mainly by the fact that it will in all probability be so far as Matabeleland is concerned, the death blow to a system of bloodthirsty tyranny which has prevailed from the time, over sixty years ago, when the forces of Moselekatse, the father of Lobengula, swept through the country between the Orange, Vaal and Limpopo rivers, leaving a ghastly mare of desolation and death behind them, and settled in the region now known as Matabeleland. The country through which this devastating army marched was, says Theale, "covered with skeletons, and there was literally no living being left behind."

From that time until the present says the Chicago Times, the Matabele have lived in the country from which they are now being ousted, not by their own toil, but by preying upon the timid tribes which originally inhabited the land, and which have ever since been compelled, under penalty of torture and death for the least delay or unwillingness, to support their ferocious taskmasters by persistent tributes of slaves, women, cattle and corn. That sixty years has been to the Mashonas and Makalakas a reign of terror.

As illustrating the general practice of the Matabeles for many years past, Rev. Father Hartman, that whom, owing to his long residence in the country, few are more competent to speak, testifies that it is the custom of an impi to approach unnoticed and unseen a Mashona kraal in the night. At the first dawn of the day the impi raises its war cry, surrounds the unfortunate kraal, and slaughters all except girls, children, or those who are fit for doing some useful work on the home journey.

Sometimes it happens that the Matabeles drive a crowd of Mashonas into one of their huts and set fire to it. This, Father Hartman states, has been going on for forty years and will not stop till the Mashonas are exterminated. Lobengula himself, with his own hands, cut off the lips, nose, ears and hands of a poor Mashona boy who was falsely accused of tasting the king's beer.

Even since the occupation of the country by the whites similar raids have been of frequent occurrence. In the early part of last year, for instance, some fugitive Makalakas came into Victoria asking for protection against a large Matabeles impi which was raiding and killing at Chibi's and other kraals across the Tuli road. In May, 1892, Chemaka and Cunye, Mashona chiefs, reported that a large impi had attacked their kraals, killed many of their people and taken away their cattle and goats.

In July of the same year, Lobengula had a fit of jealousy of the regents, Umhlaba and Sidhlolo, and acting on the king's instructions the Indiso regiment demolished the unfortunate regents and their families, root and branch. In August, while Capt. Chaplin was on an expedition to discover and punish the natives who had interfered with the telegraph instrument at Nuanetsi, he heard on all sides complaints from the natives of raids by the Matabeles.

In October last three hundred Matabeles were raiding the Makalaka between the Nuanetsi and Lundi rivers, killing men, women and children. In November Lubengula sent a large impi to punish Chief, and about the same time a party of forty Matabeles arrived at Lo Magondi's kraal and asked him why he allowed the English to dig for gold without the king's leave.

After they had agreed to discuss the matter over in the morning, Lo Magondi went to his hut, but about daylight next morning his dwelling was surrounded by Matabeles, who called him out, shot him and after came stabbed him. They then killed his two brothers and two boys and fired into the women's hut, killing two of the chief's wives. On departing the Matabeles took away with them eighty to ninety women and all the chief's goats and sheep.

In March of the present year a large Matabele impi came raiding down in the direction of Palappye, and some of the fugitives who escaped then reported the murder of several Indunas, including Lubengula's brother, Inyande. This recital of horrors may conclude with a reference to the massacre of the Mashonas in the streets of Victoria in July last, the event which directly led to the present situation.

Not Pleased.

Dr. Boyd, known as "the Country Parson," says in one of his essays that in many Scotch churches the prayers were "the preleeminaries," listened to but not joined in.

He tells an amusing story of the magistrates of a town who were forced to listen to a prayer in which they could not join.

Mr. Smith was preaching at Drumsleekie. In the concluding prayer he suddenly remembered that he had not prayed for the magistrates, sitting in their official robes before him. So he put in the prayer, just where he was:

"Have mercy upon all fools and idiots, and especially upon the magistrates of Drumsleekie."

He meant no evil, but the magistrates were not pleased.—Youth's Companion.
